Quick Notes

The second semester goes by fast and they cannot afford to fall behind. With reviews and state testing the entire month of May, they need to be caught up and have good grades by the middle of April. Falling behind with a lot of zeros will be very hard to make up.

When we resume class on January 7th, there will be a few changes in the class:

- I will no longer be putting in their grade as a percent in the gradebook. I will put in the actual points they receive on an assignment.
- I will only allow one week to turn in any late work from the day it's due. They will only get 50% of the score, not 70%.
Of course, absences will have more time.
- If an assignment is missing their number, I will deduct two points from their score.
- No names will be discarded.
- Hoods are never allowed on in class. I will not tell them to take it off, they will have lunch detention.
- 2,000 Read Theory points are due on Friday, May 29th.

ELA

They'll read a poem and also start a new story in their Study Sync book. They will also be working in their notebook and will have assignments in their Grammar Workbook (on computer).

History

The class will begin chapter 4 which is about China. They'll start working in their notebooks which will be used for their test.
